Intoxicated birds increase chance of flight mishap

By JEFF DAVIS
Staff writer

Don't drink and fly. This may be the reason why birds on campus are flying into windows and hurting themselves.

Berry Hunt, an Eastern zoology instructor, said the fermentation of the berries on Zumi flowering shrubs may be the reason people have noticed some Cedar waxwing birds flying poorly.

Fermentation of the berry is a result of the freezing and thawing process on the berries. When the waxwings eat those berries, "they may get a bit of a jag on," said Hunt.

The berries that are on the plants are left over from last fall. With the return of warm weather, food is now very scarce and the birds eat the berries to fortify themselves, Hunt said.

Eight to 10 waxwings that were found fluttering on the ground have been brought to Hunt by students and faculty. The zoology department uses them for a teaching aid. Hunt also said that he would not like any more waxwings to be brought in because they have enough, but people are urged to bring in other kinds of birds they believe to be injured—or maybe under the influence.

Hunt said the waxwings are not hurt by the alcoholic berries but in a drunken stupor they can fly into large picture windows because of the reflection of the sky and trees. In some instances, the birds may also fall prey to other animals while on the ground. However, most birds sleep it off and are good as new, said Hunt.

There is no test to see if the birds are intoxicated but, "If they fail to fly or fly in a uncoordinated fashion or sit crouched down on the ground with their head tipped to one side singing a variety of bad songs, you know that's the problem," Hunt said.

Hunt is not aware of any birds dying from actual consumption of fermented berries but a number of the birds brought into him are dead or dazed from flying into some of the large picture windows.

"This often happens with or without fermented berries. Window reflections of the sky or trees acts (See INTOXICATED, page 7A)

Kansas administrator named Eastern VPAA

By AMY CARR
Administration editor

Robert Kindrick, a former dean at Western Illinois University, will now return to the Board of Governors system as Eastern's new provost and vice president for academic affairs.

The BOG's executive committee approved Kindrick, one of four candidates interviewed for the position, Thursday morning during a special meeting held via a telephone conference call.

"Dr. Kindrick is clearly the outstanding candidate among those who interviewed," Eastern President Stanley Rives said. "I feel we have found the right man for the job at the right time."

Kindrick, who is currently the VPAA at Emporia State University in Emporia, Kan., will replace Edgar Schick as of July 1. Schick's resignation of last fall will take effect April 15.

In the absense of the VPAA, Associate Vice President Margaret Soderberg will be responsible for Academic Affairs, Eastern President Stanley Rives stated in his State of the University address. Soderberg will also be responsible for next year's academic affairs internal budget allocation budget.

Kindrick said Thursday by telephone from Emporia: "I'm very much looking forward to coming to Eastern. The institution has a very good reputation for ensuring its students have an outstanding education and to me, that's the bottom line.

"I'm looking forward to the challenges," he said. "I want to get the feel of the campus as soon as I can."

Rives, who is currently planning an extensive review of Eastern's undergraduate program, said he discussed the possible review with each of the four candidates during their two-day interviews on campus.

Although all of the candidates favored the idea of the review, which will consist of five task forces appointed to look at all areas of the undergraduate experience, Kindrick "had particularly good thoughts about that that made him the outstanding candidate for the position," Rives

Intramural abuse revealed in study

By STEVE SMITH

The team favored to win the Recreational Sports Basketball Tournament, R-Meat, was disqualified from Wednesday's first-round playoff game after it was discovered that one of their players is not a student at Eastern.

A recent investigation of the team rosters of those participating in the pro division tournament, which is made up of teams that had either one loss or were undefeated during the intramural season, revealed that R-Meat may not be the only team using ineligible players.

More than 9 percent of all basketball players participating in the pro-division of Eastern's Recreational Sport's Basketball Tournament may be ineligible.

The investigation, conducted by The Daily Eastern News, revealed that of the 389 men listed on the official rosters of the teams participating in the pro division of the tournament, 36 players names and Social Security numbers did not appear in the Records Office's list of registered students. Therefore, those players may be ineligible.

Julie Smith, assistant director of Recreational Sports, said R-Meat was disqualified from their playoff game with Last Chance after a player on Last Chance filed a protest with an official during half-time of the game.

R-Meat, which ended the regular season at 5-0, was voted the No. 1 team in the league throughout the season in a weekly Daily Eastern News poll of recreational sports supervisors and officials.

"The basis for the protest was for an ineligible player (on R-Meat)," Smith said. "His name never appeared on the score card."

The player in question, Max Edwards of nearby Oakland, was playing under the assumed name of John Pulyer during the game.

Dave Mandrell, Oakland High School athletic director, said in a telephone interview Thursday that Edwards was chosen as an All-American in 1985 for his basketball skills while a senior in high school and he also noted that Edwards was the state's leading scorer in 1985.

Mandrell said Edwards is currently enrolled at Lake Land College Community College and is (See INTRAMURAL, page 8A)

Drunk drivers face tougher laws

SPRINGFIELD—Motorists convicted of multiple drunken-driving offenses would lose their licenses for five or 10 years and face rougher criminal penalties under a plan offered Thursday by Secretary of State Jim Edgar.

Edgar said the plan, to be introduced in the Illinois House with bipartisan sponsorship, is a logical followup agreement that a repeat offender is someone who should be dealt with more severely than a first-time offender," Edgar said at a news conference where he announced the proposal.

Under the plan, a motorist's second drunken-driving conviction would carry a five-year license revocation, and a third conviction would result in a 10-year revocation.

A DUI conviction now carries a one-year license suspension regardless of the number of previous convictions.

Soviets continue nuclear testing

MOSCOW—The Soviet Union detonated an underground nuclear explosion Thursday, the second test in the two weeks since the Kremlin ended a 19-month halt in nuclear weapons testing.

At the same time, a Kremlin spokesman rejected as "speculations and outright lies" American charges of Soviet cheating on arms accords.

But the spokesman, Boris D. Pyadyshev, expressed optimism that the superpowers could soon agree to rid Europe of their medium-range missiles. He said Soviet envoys to the Geneva arms talks had been told "to work for agreement in the shortest time possible."

Senate recommends peace plan

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate voted 97-1 on Thursday to commend a new Central American peace plan, then resumed its long and bitterly divisive debate on arming Nicaragua's Contra rebels.

One Contra aid opponent, however, said that in the preliminary stages of the debate at least, he and his allies are really engaged in "shadow boxing," their legislative weapons armed only with "rubber bullets."

The real target, said Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., is not aid already in the pipeline but any future aid requests by President Reagan.

One day after the House voted 230-196 to freeze $40 million in aid to the Contras for six months pending an accounting of how previous aid was spent, Senate Democratic leaders said Congress likely would balk at future requests.

Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia said Reagan would have a hard time winning approval of the additional $105 million in Contra aid he has requested for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

Byrd and other leaders in the fight to end U.S. aid to the Contras said they will not be able to stop the release of the $40 million-the last installment of a $100 million aid package approved last year-because they cannot muster the two thirds majority needed to override a presidential veto.

Future Contra aid requests would be easier to block because only simple House and Senate majorities would be needed.

Still, Sasser and other Contra aid opponents said they would seek votes now to subject the $40 million to a six-month moratorium.

Judge dismisses North's lawsuit

WASHINGTON (AP)—A federal judge declaring Thursday that the nation needs "expeditious and complete disclosure" of the Iran-Contra affair, dismissed lawsuits by Lt. Col. Oliver North that sought to stop an independent counsel's investigation of his central role.

U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker, said North was premature in seeking a ruling that the office of independent counsel was unconstitutional.

"Courts have almost never found that an ongoing criminal investigation imposes a sufficient hardship to the person investigated to warrant judicial review prior to his or her indictment," Parker said in his order.

"The plaintiff has not suffered an injury of sufficient keenness to warrant the court's intercession," Parker said. "For that reason, the court finds that plaintiff's challenge to the constitutionality of the independent counsel machinery is not ripe for adjudication and that his complaints should be dismissed."

Parker said the nation needs "an expeditious and complete disclosure of our government's involvement in the Iran-Contra affair".

Area leaders skip breakfast

By CHRYS TAL PHILPOTT

About 40 area residents were stood up by their breakfast dates Thursday when the event's invited speakers, the Charleston city commissioners, failed to show up.

The breakfast, "Issues and Eggs," was sponsored by the Charleston Area Chamber of Commerce and was designed to give residents a chance to chat with and ask questions to the commissioners over breakfast.

The only commissioner to show up, however, was Mayor Murray Choate, who said, "I'm disappointed that the other council members didn't show up."

Though not a commissioner, Chris Bezruki, executive assistant to the city council, also showed up to represent the city council.

Joe Campbell, executive director of the Charleston Area Chamber of Commerce, said, "I thought it went very well. I think the mayor fielded the questions and handled it well considering none of the other council members showed up—but we had a good turnout."

Choate, surrounded by four empty chairs, stood at the head table and answered questions from the early morning crowd on a variety of topics.

One of the first topics to come up was the city's $20,000 deficit.

Choate said, though, that thanks to a lot of budget cutting and the city's three percent utility tax passed in May 1986, financially things should be looking up for the city by the end of 1987.

"In looking at the ending budget for this year... we're going to be coming up with about $100,000 in the black. We hope to increase upon that," he said.

Choate said the city is supposed to have in reserve six months operational expenses. The monthly operational expense for Charleston averages about $40,000, he said.

Choate went on to later discuss what he called the never-ending problem of the spillway and a recent $500,000 in state funds for spillway work.

"They (the state) did release the $500,000 we had anticipated getting. We did receive that," he said.

Choate said what amazed him about the funding was that the state released the money without a real cost fund on the spillway.

"I don't know that they do that very often," he said.

A general estimate of the total cost is projected at $2.5 million, he said.

Choate proceeded to relieve one questioning resident's mind by adding, "We don't anticipate any increase in watersewage rates. That has already been bonded for."

Campbell said another Issues and Eggs breakfast is being planned for April sometime, but that it would feature several area legislators.

Thompson declines invitation but asks for rain check

By JEFF BRITT

Gov. James R. Thompson negatively answered an invitation to visit Eastern from Board of Governors Representative Mike Ashack stating although he couldn't get here in the near future, he would like to receive further invitations.

The letter, addressed from the office of the governor, concluded "Thank you again for your invitation, and I hope you will contact me for any future events.

Ashack sent his letter on Feb. 15 and received the governor's letter this week. He said he'd like to see Thompson at a Student Senate meeting.

"I think it would be a thrill for a student senator to get to ask the governor questions at a Student Senate meeting," Ashack said.

"It's not just him but it would be nice to have some top officials attend things on campus," he said. "I think if we get some top officials at Eastern, they can see how great Eastern really is."

He would like to offer more invitations in the future. "I just don't think we extend our invitations enough," Ashack said. "We have some cool things here."

$1.5 million needed for new hydro-electric generator

By STUART TART

Although the city of Charleston has received $500,000 from the state to help repair the Lake Charleston spillway, the city is still short $1.5 million it needs to install a proposed hydro-electric generator.

The proposed generator would be used to produce electricity to operate the pumps that move water from the side-channel reservoir to the city's water treatment plant, said Executive Assistant Chris Bezruki.

The city is viewing its options on how to gain the $1.5 million," he said. "The city is asking the state for (more) financial help in replacing the spillway."

Heavy rains in the fall of 1985 caused the Lake Charleston spillway to burst. The city has applied to ask for funds to repair the spillway and recently received $500,000 from the Illinois Department of Transportation, Division of Water Resources, Bezruki said.

The money will not be received by the city in one lump sum. Instead, the city will apply to the state to be reimbursed for costs in repairing the spillway up to the $500,000 limit, he said.

However, the city still needs $1.5 million to install the proposed hydro-electric generator, which could save the city $48,000 a year in electric costs, he said.

Currently, the city is paying Central Illinois Public Service Co. $70,000 to pump water from the reservoir to the plant.

"Some of that cost ($70,000) can be offset (by the generator)," Bezruki said. "This revenue ($48,000) can pay off a portion of the bonds sold to reconstruct the spillway."

Bezruki said the Illinois Department of Energy and Natural Resources has offered to pay $400,000 to $500,000 toward the purchase of the generator.

Design work for repair of the spillway has been completed, Bezruki said, and construction is scheduled to begin this spring.

Before a generator can be installed at the spillway site, he said the city has to negotiate both the final costs of its hook-up and the possibility of selling excess electricity with CIPS.

"If it (the generator) is installed, it will be installed towards the latter half of the project," he said.

Bezruki said the project is scheduled to be completed in November or December.

Don't let rise in temperature lower grades

With warmer weather coaxing Eastern students from their winter coats and curing cabin fever, it is time again for Frisbee, softball and sunbathing.

Spring is the traditional time for cleaning up the mess that winter months left behind. Ever since a very early age, students have been programmed to believe spring is the time to clean. Some residences even look as if that was the only time they are cleaned.

Your landlord might respect you more if you got the dust bunnies out from under your bed or behind your desk, but it might be more beneficial to do some spring cleaning on your study habits before it is too late.

When Mother Nature knocks at the door with inviting temperatures, students need to remember their commitment to the classroom and not let annual spring rituals get in the way of studying. Even though you might have had a good enough grade point average last semester to carry several less-than-adequate grades this semester, your work overall will suffer if you don't live up to your end of the bargain in completing class assignments.

With midterms almost over and spring break around the corner, it may seem like an opportune time to "blow off" reading or studying notes, but there won't be time after spring break in order to catch up before finals.

Only five weeks of classes remain after spring break before finals which won't allow time to catch up and prepare for exams. As a wise man once said, "Don't put off till tomorrow what you can do today."

The warmer temperatures may seem tempting, but enjoy the nice weather on the way to class and after homework and studying are done.

Your turn

Company might be unrepeatable

Editor:

I received a letter from Joseph P. O'Mera, inviting all faculty to participate in a fundraising event called "Bookdrive '87". The cause for the fundraising, "Make Room for Art," could not be more worthy and I commend him for his efforts.

Since I was employed by a textbook-publishing company for some time, I also look at the "Bookdrive" from another point of view. I know the high cost to publishers of supplying unused complimentary books to teachers. When those books, by whatever means fall into the hands of a rival publishing company, and I am certain it is the same company condemned for the practice during the years I was in the publishing business, it means that that company makes money at the expense of other publishers by highly questionable means. That company does not give to libraries those books it has not published, but collected, it sells them to college students—at a profit, even after "paying" a collecting organization.

Faculty members might better make a donation to "Make Room for Art" and return unwanted, unsolicited, complimentary books to the publishers, or give the books to students.

AB cuts $17,500 of board budget

By KIM MIKUS
Staff writer

The Apportionment Board cut the Student Publications' budget by $17,500 and requested a revised budget to be submitted at next week's meeting.

The cutting began when, AB faculty member, Ed Marlow proposed to cut the Student Publication's administrative payroll by $8,750. Laura Ruback seconded the motion.

Marlow said, the cut would be a 2 percent reduction in the payroll. It "isn't as big as it sounds," he said.

He said Student Publications could sell more advertising to earn more money.

Another justification Marlow made for his proposed decrease was that Student Publications has money in its reserve account right now that it is not using. He said the money in the reserve is used in case the machinery breaks down.

However Marlow added, "The money in the reserve account has no purpose right now."

In addition to the payroll cut, two other cuts were made in the Student Publications' budget.

The AB cut $2,425 from the "equipment not elsewhere classified" line item and $6,325 in student fee funding for a graduate assistant to Student Publications.

One AB member said the reason the cuts were made was because there were no verifiable justifications in the requested Student Publications budget.

After the AB made the cuts, Dale Righter said, "There must be justifications in the budget and they are no where to be found in this (Student Publications) budget."

The AB decided the justifications made in the Student Publication's budget were unclear and unjustifiable. A motion was made and passed by the AB to request "a revised budget and separate what is being spent on the newspaper and what is spent on Warbler," AB Chair Christy Wolfe said.

In other business, the AB deliberated on eight committee budgets on the University Board. Of the eight committees, $4,610 has been cut so far.

As the meeting concluded, Wolfe said $21,060 has been cut from the requested budgets so far.

The AB originally set out to cut $17,000 from the six boards under AB budgetary control. Wolfe said the extra $4,060 will either be distributed to the six board's budgets or be deposited in the AB reserve account.

Minister says Jesus will return soon

By CRAIG EDWARDS
Activities editor

Dave Butts, a local minister, told an audience of about 100 Thursday night not to get out their calendars and mark "Second Coming," but expressed his belief that Jesus will return soon.

Butts, pastor of the Kansas Christian Church located 14 miles east of Charleston, cited more than 20 reasons why he believes Jesus is coming back "real soon" at a campus-wide lecture sponsored by the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship.

He said although many prophecies in the Bible predict the second coming, no one knows the exact day and hour that Jesus will return. "Jesus will come like a thief in the night," Butts said, referring to a scripture.

Butts said even though we don't know exactly when Jesus will return, the Bible contains many signs of his second coming that we should look for. "It will come upon us like labor pains," he said, again referring to God's word in the Bible.

Butts went on to explain that pregnancies only last for nine months and it's almost inevitable to avoid the pains of labor. He also said although doctors can use medical technology to make predictions, the exact day and hour of birth can't be predicted. "Just like the second coming of Jesus," he said.

Butts, who has been in the ministry for 13 years, said he decided to become a minister after reading "The Late Great Planet Earth," a bestseller by Hal Lindsey, while he was in college.

A graduate of Indiana State University and Lincoln (Ill.) Christian College, Butts was elected to the Indiana House of Representatives in 1980 and served as campaign manager for the mayor of Terre Haute. "I feel people of all religious faiths need to use their morals in the political process," he said.

Butts said he believes Christians need to become involved in politics and listed political issues as the key forces behind many of the prophecies predicting the second coming of Jesus.

Heading the list of reasons why he believes the second coming is near is the return of Israel as a nation. As predicted in the Bible, Israel again became a nation in 1948. "The return of Israel will be a banner for all nations," Butts said, quoting the Bible.

He also said although Jerusalem has been under the rule of many nations, it returned to Jewish rule in 1967, another event he said is prophecized in the Bible.

Butts also added earthquakes to the list of prophecies that have been fulfilled. As predicted in the Bible, he said earthquakes have become more frequent throughout the past six centuries.

He said there were 150 recorded earthquakes in the 15th century, 153 in the 16th century, 378 in the 17th century, 640 in the 18th century, 2,119 in the 19th century and in the 20th century, they happen everyday. "This doesn't mean California is just going to fall off into the ocean, a major fault runs through Illinois," Butts added.

Butts pointed out that he isn't privileged to secret knowledge, adding that all of this information and much more related to the second coming is all in the Bible. He said the purpose of all this information is not the scare people, but to warn them to change their lifestyles. "When Jesus returns," Butts said, "I want to be found at peace with him."

"I have not bought a gravestone or a burial plot because I don't believe I am going to die," Butts said, adding that if he is wrong and dies of old age, at least he didn't lead a Christian life for nothing.

Women's panel reveals problems in business world

Elda Hall, a member of the symposium for Women's History and Awareness Month, speaks to a capacity crowd Thursday night in the Union addition Charleston-Mattoon Room. The symposium, sponsored by the Women's Studies Council, was titled "How to succeed in Business Without being one of the Boys." Four panel members spoke about the problems they have encountered when entering the male-dominated work force.

By JEFF BRITT
Staff writer

A woman has to do twice as well to get half the recognition a man gets, according to Elda Hall, a member of a symposium for Women's History and Awareness Month, sponsored by the Women's Studies Council.

Four panelists spoke at the symposium titled, "How to Succeed in Business Without being one of the Boys" on feminine achievement in the business world.

Hall, who is a purchasing agent at Eastern, asked the capacity crowd, "Who says this is a man's world?"

"When he is born, they say 'How is his mother?' When he is married, they say 'Isn't she a lovely bride?' When he dies, they say 'how much money did he leave her?'"

Priscilla Ebdon, who is a Coles County attorney, also licensed as an attorney in Texas and a former English instructor at Eastern, described some frightening experiences she encountered in a "man's world."

"Imagine going to a law firm with a whole background that was full of honors and having somebody tell you 'I can't hire you because my wife wouldn't like it,' Women attorneys will never catch on," she said.

"It was scary at first, because I perceived my profession as male-dominated—and it still is to an extent," Ebdon said.

Susan Kaufman, who is the news director of the Radio/TV Center at Eastern, told of how she was urged not to pursue her chosen field. "I was fully-advised that Radio/TV was not for women because they don't have authoritative voices."

Kaufman said there is resistance from males to let females into the field "because no one wants to give up power."

Sarah Preston, who is president of the downtown branch of Boatmen's National Bank of Charleston, said at the bank they all work as a team, giving neither sex preferential treatment.

"It made me feel great when a man on this team said 'You know, Susie, sometimes I forget you're a woman.' I said 'That's OK, Sometimes I forget you're a man.'"

"The biggest problem I had," said Hall, "is getting equal pay for equal work."

She said she once complained to the Eastern administration because she was training a man was making more than she was. Daniel Marvin, Eastern's president at the time, saw that she was given better pay and a promotion.

When Kaye Woodward, a home economics instructor who introduced the panelists asked "How do you recognize and counteract corporate gains?" Kaufman responded, "turf battles."

"It's certainly not pleasant," Ebdon said. "You have to be able to develop a thick skin and ignore an awful lot of things."

"If you don't want your femininity to be a problem, don't flaunt it," Preston said.

Charleston Jaycees hold first Fright Night on 13th

By CHRYSTAL PHILPOTT
City editor

Halloween is not the only time of year people can be frightened. A new kind of fear is in town.

Fright Night is coming to town Friday... Friday the 13th.

The Charleston Jaycees will sponsor its first Fright Night from 7 p.m. to midnight Friday at 906 Madison Ave., the same house where they hold their annual haunted house.

"It's something brand new. Our haunted house has been such a success we wanted to give people more," said Ray Richardson, one of the directors of the Charleston Jaycee's and one of the chairs of Fright Night.

"Everybody always said your haunted house is really great, why don't you do it more often. So, that's what we're doing," he said.

Friday the 13th's Fright Night house will be different from Halloween's haunted house, Richardson said.

"We don't want people to think it's just another haunted house. It's not.

"There are about 11 different rooms and each one will have something different to scare you. It's not ghost and goblins scare. It's Friday the 13th type of scare," he said.

Richardson said he expects about 200 people or so to attend the one night event.

The Halloween haunted house was visited by 2,600 people during its four night run.

"The turnout from EIU on Halloween was really fabulous. This will be a lot of fun—especially for college age kids," Richardson said.

Kindrick said he plans to meet with the groups that the provost serves and discuss their plans and needs and how the office of academic affairs can assist them in reaching their goals.

He added that during the month of July he will be "involved in the information gathering process."

Kindrick, along with his wife, will be in Charleston next week to become familiar with the city and gather information about the university, he said.

However, he added, "I don't intend to intrude on the plans for the university now. Jump the gun, so to speak."

Before taking on his new position, Kindrick said he has several things to take care of at Emporia State. "I will continue to operate. Just as I don't want to be an early gosling at Eastern, I don't intend to be a lame duck here either."

While interviewing on campus Feb.

17-18, Kindrick expressed concern with the lack of funds Eastern receives. Eastern is the most underfunded university in the state.

He said this lack of funding presents the need for careful detail when developing the university's budget.

Kindrick, who described himself as "a teacher/scholar," also emphasized the need for a good general education background. He said sufficient writing and speaking courses are necessary for a good background.

Emporia State President Robert E. Glennen said, in an Eastern press release, he regretted accepting Kindrick's resignation. "Dr. Kindrick has made a significant contribution to Emporia State University during his tenure here. He has been a respected colleague. He will be deeply missed."

Kindrick, who specializes in English literature and political science, earned his Ph.D. from the University of Texas, Austin.

like a mirror," he said.

Hunt has no idea of the amount of alcohol it takes to get a bird drunk. But if you figure the consumption necessary on a per weight base, waxwings weigh less than 50 grams, "so I suspect a wee small shot to do it." Hunt said he has no idea how long it would take for a bird to sober up from from a good drunk or how much alcohol is in the berries.

"We would have to get the chemistry department to work on that. We could have a joint venture to study the inebriation in campus birds," he said.

Maybe the study should be held on Friday afternoons at Ike's or Marty's.

CAA approves course proposals

By MICHELLE MUELLER
Staff writer

The Council on Academic Affairs unanimously passed three new course proposals Thursday.

Special education 4730, "Consultation and Curriculum Adaptation for Individuals with Special Needs," was passed pending BOG approval of a proposed new option.

Kathleen Shank, special education department chair, said the class will be required under the proposed "Standard Special Option."

Shank said an existing law requires special education teachers to have consultation skills, but Eastern graduates have said they were not comfortable with the level of skills they had. This course should correct that problem, Shank said.

Since it is an education course, the Council on Teacher Education will also have to approve the course.

French 2220, "French for Business," was passed with almost no discussion by the CAA. Brigitte Callay, chair of the French department, said there are similar business classes in Spanish and German and that students have been asking for a French class.

With the passage of the class, French 3810, "French Advanced Phonetics and Diction" was dropped from the curriculum.

The second course approved, political science 3543, "Civil Liberties in America," was also passed. Political Science 3533, "Civil Proceedings" was dropped.

Choir festival features high school students

Eastern's music department has a busy weekend ahead with the first annual High School Show Choir Festival slated for 9 a.m. Saturday and a concert by Eastern's Concert Band scheduled for 3 p.m. Sunday.

The events will take place in Dvorak Concert Hall. The programs are open to the public.

The choir festival will open at 9 a.m. with a demonstrative clinic given by The Collegians, Eastern's show choir.

After the clinic there will be performances and workshops by six high school choirs. Each group will be critiqued and will then perform in the final concert at 3 p.m.

Intramural

Mandrell said Edwards is currently enrolled at Lake Land College Community College and is expected to be eligible to play basketball for Lake Land next year.

Smith said she was not familiar with Edwards past basketball history. "A thing like that I wouldn't know," she said, but added that R-Meat eventually outscored their opponents 65-56, despite the disqualification.

Once aware of the protest Smith said, "I called the coaches together and their coach (for R-Meat) admitted he (Edwards) was illegal. R-Meat knew they were in the wrong."

Edwards could not be reached Thursday for comment.

Director of Recreational Sports David Dutler called the findings of the News investigation "a little surprising," but added that the figures may not represent faculty or staff members who had purchased a Recreational Sports ID card for $10. Students, faculty and staff are eligible to participate in intramurals.

However, the 36 players' names also were not listed in the university's faculty and staff telephone directory.

The investigation also revealed that the names of 30 additional players, about 8 percent of the participants in the pro division, are registered students but their Social Security numbers were either inaccurate or not listed on the rosters. There is the possibility that ineligible persons, playing under assumed names, are using the name of registered students.

"If you've got 9 percent or 1 in 10 that put down wrong Social Security numbers, it's surprising that college students don't know their Social Security number," Dutler said.

Currently team players in the Recreational Sports Basketball Tournament are not required to present a validated ID before the basketball game begins, Dutler said.

"I would never want to put that responsibility (checking IDs) on the officials," Dutler said. "There are other things they have to be doing other than that. You start putting those responsibilities on officials and who's going to go out (and be an official)," he added.

The investigation, launched after several complaints of suspected player ineligibility, revealed that eight, or 18 percent, of the 45 teams in the pro division of the tournament are playing with some kind of discrepancy on their player rosters.

"That (18 percent) is quite a large number," Dutler said of the findings. The infractions include incorrect or non-existent Social Security numbers, players listed who are not students, faculty or staff at Eastern, or listing too many players on a roster.

"I really don't see it (ineligible players) as a problem on this campus," Dutler said.

Other teams in the pro tournament found to have more than two discrepancies on their team roster include: The Red Raiders, The Lakers, I Tappa Kegga, The Sigma Chi A team, Delta Chi, Gucci, The Nasal Drips, The Motor City Players and The Slamenhamskis.

The trauma of long-distance relationships:

RICK STUCKEY / Verge photo editor

True love —or just a pain in the ICTC?

RICK STUCKEY / Verge photo editor

The pros and cons of affairs across the miles

By LEA SPENCER
Staff writer

Long-distance relationships emotionally and financially challenge many college students, causing both heartthrob and heartache—especially when the dreaded phone bill arrives.

Eastern students interviewed had their share of high phone bills, ranging from almost nothing to $170 a month.

Senior Susan Wittmer, separated from her boyfriend for only a month, said she was "happy" that her first phone bill was only $100.

The students' longest calls hit a high of two hours and a low of just a few minutes. Of those who talked only a minimum amount of time, many believe that talking too long leaves little to write in letters or to tell in person.

Despite this—and the often exorbitant bills—the phone is still the most often used and most popular form of communication.

Yet, letters still have their merit, said senior Susan Stewart, who would "rather get a letter than a phone call," because her boyfriend expresses more in a letter than over the phone.

Of course, seeing each other in person is the favorite form of communication. Being apart "makes you realize how much that person means to you," said transfer student Ken Japlon.

One reason Japlon transferred to Eastern in January was to be with his girlfriend Ronda Settle. They were separated for two semesters of the year and two months they had been seeing each other.

Settle said that their relationship had grown stronger over that time, making them want to see each other more. Now that they are together the relationship is "wonderful" and "cheaper, too," Settle added.

Being apart often does strengthen relationships, and the partners become more serious, which as engaged senior Sharon Dorf said "is very hard, because we want to be together all the time."

Jeanne Hartmann, who is also engaged, agreed, saying that the distance is "getting old." It is good for the relationship but bad for her, she said, noting that since the engagement (two months ago) her grades have suffered.

Hartmann added that one good point of being apart is that they "don't fight anymore."

Most students agreed that the most difficult part of being away from each other is the loneliness and "adapting to the absence," Stewart said.

Jane Watson, a married graduate student, has seen her husband only twice in nine months. He is working in Colorado and although it is "tough" she said she didn't believe she could ask him to quit his job, nor could they afford for him to quit to come to Eastern with her for a year.

Watson says the distance is "very difficult" because she doesn't have him here to share the small things, but, at the same time, she said it "made me depend on myself more for things."

Another problem with distance is jealousy. Junior Paul Handzik said he and his girlfriend agreed to see other people, but they don't like it when it happens.

Distance makes many couples unsure of each other, but, as senior Mary O'Brien said, "Being apart made us trust each other because we had to."

Some students go to Eastern's Counseling Center for help in dealing with the problem of trust. Director Bud Sanders said how well the couple communicates is important to maintaining trust in a long-distance relationship.

One problem he noted was uneven change. "When we grow unequal anytime it's a strain, but in a long-distance relationship it becomes an even bigger strain," he said.

Many students go to the Counseling Center to help sort things out and to see if there are better ways of coping with the relationship, Sanders said. Students are welcome to come in and discuss any problems in their long distance relationship.

As senior Dan Murphy said, being away has "been hard, but everybody has to do it."

Faculty recital brings out crowd, classic performance

By DANE BUCZKOWSKI
Staff writer

Once in a while, there will be a competition between a musical performance and a non-musical UB event. Because of the interests and priorities of the students here, the UB events get a higher turnout.

Tuesday night was an exception in the George Sanders (Eastern) vs. Milt Tatelman (Hollywood) bout. Piano music has been around for a few centuries, so Sanders' defeat was only appropriate.

Sanders performed his faculty recital to a crowd of about 80, and did it with the usual finesse and grace of past performances.

With his flowering hibiscus plant to stage left, Sanders played with the life and strength that goes along with the plant kingdom. We heard works by Mozart, Brahms, Liszt, Bendel and Griffes.

One of the Brahms pieces and the Griffes piece were solo pieces in which Richard Barta and Timothy Lane assisted. Barta played the Sonata in F Minor for clarinet and piano of Johannes Brahms. Lane held a usually fine performance on flute with "Poem" by Charles T. Griffes, a late romantic period American composer.

Much virtuosity was exhibited on "Variations on an Original Theme" (which I guess means credit must be given where it's due) of Brahms. This is a rather long and complicated work consisting of a main theme and 10 variations. Sanders proved his memory and style are as good as ever here.

Any piece by Mozart is good for getting my full attention and respect, and the "Fantasy in C Minor" sure did. The work has been said to represent a Mozart opera. There is a very mysterious beginning with different ideas and moods. A well-interpreted opening piece.

My only complaint: Where was the Baroque period? Of course this is only a matter of opinion, because a performer chooses whichever music he wishes. However, I am big on the Baroque and think that a nice Bach prelude and Fugue would have been that missing puzzle piece.

Another main event in the cultural spotlight this week was the Los Angeles Piano Quartet which played at the Tarble Arts Center Sunday. This was the second-to-last musical group in the Tarble Chamber Series. The last will be the EIU Chamber Ensembles at 3 p.m. April 5 at Tarble.

Last Sunday's performance could only be described in one way. With the words of Wolfgang Amedeus Mozart, the L.A. quartet "flowed like oil." Or as I would edit this quote: "like oiliiiiiiiiiiiill."

Hey, I'm not at all exaggerating here. These four men were so together and precise with almost every note that a studio recording could barely have been better.

The group recently recorded the "Piano Quartet in G Minor" by Brahms on Klavier records. I hope they continue to please audiences for years to come.

Just a reminder: many people have asked why some music events aren't minutes until class is over. I've survived!"

I turned to listen to the end of the lecture. But he continued to talk, it was surely over two minutes; had he become hypnotized by the silence of the room and the tick of the clock? Was he ever going to stop? I began to envision the sun setting outside the classroom, the lights in the hall being turned out and the professor only awakening when the janitor entered to clean the room around midnight.

I snapped out of it when I heard him say something about continuing on Tuesday. He gathered his items and walked out.

Somehow I had lived through this test advertised in the paper. Well, sometimes other things are considered "news." So keep an eye on the huge sign in front of the Fine Arts building. This is almost as informative as the "culture column."

OK everyone, next Saturday is Bach's birthday. March 21 (1685) marks the day that one of the fathers of today's music was born. I hope everyone celebrates this day with 302 of something; I think I will eat 302 slices of toast.

of endurance. Then I realized, he never did hand back the test.

TALE-END

On being the only one in the class that wouldn't end

By TIM LEE
Staff writer

It was a sunny Thursday afternoon and, after trying (and failing) to think of something better to do all morning, I decided to go to history class. To protect all those involved, of which there are two, I won't divulge any more information about those involved.

Well, anyway, I arrived in class a little early and since no one else had arrived yet I began to read my textbook to get ahead on the lecture. Five or 10 minutes must have passed before I heard the professor walk in. Looking up for the first time after being stimulated by the book, I was shocked to realize that I was the only one in the class.

The only one! How's that for a specialized class? I began to wonder if it was the wrong day. Thousands of ideas raced through my mind: had the teacher cancelled it, were my classmates playing a cruel trick on me, was my watch broke?

I then began to plan. Should I leave and make it 100 percent non-attendance. Yeah!

No! I suddenly thought, this would be a great way to make some points in the class. We would just be getting back our tests that we took Tuesday. I'll get mine back, he'll say, "Gosh, you're a great student. You get an 'A' in the class. Why don't you go home now?"

Oh, how naive a college senior can be.

Before I go on, I should say a word about the test and the probable reason why I'm the only one here. First, the test, at least mine, could more properly have been graded by using Fawn Hall's paper shredder (Translation: it was not easy). Second, the class after a test is often skipped—as I'm sure you know.

Just then the professor walked in, ending all thoughts of me blowing off this class. I decided to stick out the 10 or 20 minutes of class he would hold. He's too good a guy to give a full lecture.

Upon entering and surveying the room, he mumbled some comment about people going straight from the test to the drop lines and then said proudly, "Well, I'm going to do my duty."

Your duty, buddy, is to let this hard-working, conscientious student leave.

Now this class is great for insomnia anyway. But how do you fall asleep inconspicuously in a class when you're the only person there?

I began to giggle to myself (eventhough there was a lack of friends to giggle with) as I pictured him taking the roll, name by name. Would he stop reading names when he got to mine and I answered his call?

Intelligently, he didn't call roll, but he didn't even ask my name. Here I am, looking for bonus points and he doesn't even know who I am.

I suppressed my depression and began to think of ways to get out of this embarrassing predicament. Short of getting up and walking out (which is not good for brownie points) there was none.

You're probably thinking, "How did attendance drop this low?"

The first day of class brought about 11 eager learners to the class. That number dropped (literally) to nine, then six, and only four of us were left to take the test on Tuesday. That means three people were outside in the sun at that time and missed this brilliant lecture. I wished it were four.

I decided to look at my watch; surely by now the class was nearly done. Nope, only 15 minutes had passed. I still had an hour left and this guy showed no signs of slowing.

Time dragged on. Seconds became months. My hair was beginning to gray. I had to get out of there before I passed my sexual peak. I couldn't get old yet. I hadn't even dated Christie Brinkley.

I was beginning to feel like an expert on pre Revolutionary War England. Great, but how could I ever use this information in life?

It would have been better had this guy even looked at me or acknowledged me—but no. He continued to talk, lecturing to the clock (not to me), not to know the time but seemingly to keep me from looking at it. I began to feel helpless, like the class would never end.

Just then, a chance: he turned to write something on the board. I turned and looked, "Pfew, only two

Black Student Union holds pageant

Miss Black EIU announced Saturday in Grand Ballroom

STEPHANIE WOLFANGER

The 11th annual Miss Black EIU pageant, sponsored by the Black Student Union, will be held 8 p.m. Saturday in the University Grand Ballroom.

Pageant coordinator Ceci Brinker said eight contestants have been rehearsing since the middle of January to compete for the 1987 Miss Black EIU. They will compete in categories of talent, personality, African garment apparel, and wear and impromptu questioning.

The winner will receive a variety of prizes donated by Deborah Howell Cosmetic Co. and other local businesses. The grand prize includes an opportunity to model for the Deborah Howell Cosmetic Co. in commercials and advertisements.

The pageant will feature entertainment by the variety band "Sparks," led by graduate assistant Marvin Sparks.

Tickets for the pageant can be purchased in the University Union, room 316, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. or at the door at a cost of $2.50 for students and $3.00 for the general public.

Mexico trip gives chance to study

SCOTT LOMBARDO
Staff writer

Eastern's botany department wants students to go to class... in Mexico.

Charles Arzeni, an Eastern botany instructor, said he is searching for students interested in a "once in a life time" trip with Eastern's Study Abroad program this summer in Mexico.

The program, which runs from June 8-26, is offered by the botany department to give students the chance to earn between three and six credit hours while studying in Mexico.

For $550, the trip includes housing at the University of Monterrey, in Mexico, Arzeni said. The rooms are furnished with two bunk beds, a desk, sink and closet.

They are comparable to the rooms at Stevenson Towers, Arzeni said. The cafeteria has high sanitation, with a wide variety of high-quality food. Even the tap water is safe to drink, he said, adding that the average price for a three-meal day is from $4 to $6.

For the three to six weeks of your stay, you are required to collect plant samples and write a paper on the vegetation in the area, Arzeni said. The participants will be permitted to attend classes, laboratories and lectures at the university, he added.

The students will also be able to attend several field trips to the desert and the surrounding mountains of Monterrey to study and collect plant species, Arzeni said.

Trips will also be offered to Mexico City or any place they wish to visit, he added.

However, he said students must bring spending and transportation money to get to and from Mexico.

The trip is limited to 25 students, Arzeni said, adding that a $50 deposit is required by April 1, 1987. Applications may be obtained from Arzeni in the botany office located in the Life Science Building.

Arzeni started this program in 1968 and has offered it ever since.

Lady cagers' 3rd place finish cause to cheer

By Mike Fitzgerald

Despite a heart-breaking 53-51 loss to Southern Illinois in the Gateway Conference Championship game, the Lady Panthers' basketball team still has much to be happy about their season. Eastern's third-place finish in the conference standings was its highest since joining the league. The Panthers had taken fifth the previous two years and were predicted to finish fifth again this year.

Eastern also had its ninth straight winning season and its eighth under coach Bobbie Hilke.

The Panthers entered the season winning just two starters from a team that finished 18-10 overall last year. They finished 17-13 overall and 11th in the Gateway.

Eastern, with a freshman point guard named Barb Perkes and a freshman center by the name of Laura Green, not only finished in third place in the conference, but came within a shot of making the NCAA Tournament.

Coach of Eastern coach Bobbie Hilke's goal was to have a balanced scoring team.

Forward Lisa Tyler averaged 13.1 points a game, guard Pat Hamilton averaged 13.8 points and Perkes averaged 12.0 points a game, thus accomplishing one goal.

The Panthers' defense was suspect during the first half of the season, but the team's solid defense down the stretch carried them into the tournament final.

"Our defense was pitiful early in the year, but we did play great defense in the last one-fourth of our games and we learned something about how hard we had to play to win the big games," Hilke said.

The coach was pleased with the play of Hamilton and Perkes, two freshman who stepped into difficult positions and played with the confidence of veterans.

Everybody in the conference was so impressed with the play of those two, and people are still talking about the play of Laura," Hilke said.

"They still have to get to be better shooters, but I think they did a good job of coming in and learning defensive concepts."

Eastern's lone off-the-court problem this year occurred when forward Kim

Hilke found the answer to that problem in forward Ann Brown, who took over for Green and played well, especially under the boards.

"Ann filled in for us in a difficult position, and gained the team's confidence in the first Gateway game against Southwest Missouri," Hilke said.

Two big keys to the Panthers' success this season were Hamilton and Tyler.

Hamilton led the team in scoring with her 13.8 average and in field goal shooting with 54 percent. Hamilton also put her name in the Eastern record book when she had a single-game high 35 points against Northern Iowa.

Tyler finished second in scoring with a 13.1 average but led the team in boards with a 7.6 average, in assists with 99 and in another category which doesn't show up in the statistics, Hilke explained.

"She held us together most of the year," Hilke said. "She did a nice job as team captain and took on the responsibility that we needed from her."

Tyler has also established herself as a two-position player, being able to play small forward because of her shooting range and being able to play power forward because of her strength inside.

The highlights of the season as Hilke sees it were defeating Illinois State at Lantz Gym, beating Southwest Missouri in the first round of the tournament and the togetherness of the team on the Hawaii trip.

The coach also sees some things that Eastern will have to work on if the team is to become a contender.

"We hope to be a little bit better shooting team and we hope to move up from the lower division to the upper division in rebounding," Hilke said.

With all but Hamilton returning next year, the Panthers should be at or near the top of the Gateway Conference next season.

The NCAA Tournament bid that escaped Eastern this year may be a year away.

inside Field in the regional finals. Former teammate and Panther standout Matt Gamache remembers Francis from that season.

"He was definitely an asset to our team in '83, a team I consider to have been the best team in the nation at that time. Mark was an emotional leader, just watching him play made the entire team motivated," Gamache said.

When Southern Methodist University offered Hyndman the job as its head coach, he left Eastern's athletic department and took three Panther starters with him. One of those was Francis.

"Mark is a very special player being transferred with me to SMU. He has really carried the load for us when we needed some help, and he gives a physical beating every game and he just keeps playing. Mark has been a real key to our success these past few years," Hyndman said.

Hyndman remembers the unforgettable Panther team he coached when Francis was a freshman. "That was and probably will be the best team I'll ever coach," Hyndman said.

Since Francis left Charleston, not only has he been named Budweiser's Soccer Player of the Week in Soccer America, but he has continued to maintain his All-American status for the past three years.

Francis was also listed this year as one of Soccer America's top-10 midfielders. Francis has made great strides since his earlier days at Eastern.

"I hope to play professional soccer after I graduate and make a life for myself here in the states," Francis said.

Maton travels to Oklahoma for NCAA track competition

By BARRY BOTTINO
Staff writer

A pre-spring break vacation to Oklahoma City would sit well with any Eastern student right now. But for junior Jim Maton this is not at all a vacation.

Maton will be Eastern's lone representative at the NCAA Indoor Track and Field Championships this weekend in Oklahoma after qualifying in the 1,000-yard run earlier this season. However, the national championships will be run in meters.

As of March 4, Maton's time of 2:22.04 (which has been converted to meters) ranked fourth overall and was only 0.26 of a second away from the fastest qualifier, Villanova's Shawn O'Neil.

"Jim is going to be a force to be reckoned with," Eastern assistant Tom Akers said. "He's going to impress a lot of people."

Last weekend at the Capitol Invitational in Indianapolis, Maton held a 10-yard lead on the first leg of the two-mile relay on Big Ten 1,000-yard champion Jim White of Indiana and Missouri Valley 1,000-yard champ Pete Palumbo of Illinois State.

"He handled them with no problem," Akers said.

Eastern head coach Neil Moore said, "He has a definite chance of being an All-American."

For Maton to accomplish that feat, he would need to finish in the top six in Saturday's finals.

"I should be able to (become an All-American) if I run my race," Maton said.

Maton's leadoff leg of the two-mile relay last Saturday was clocked at 1:48.3, which would have placed him in sixth place in the open section of the 800-meter run.

"These guys (at the national meet) could be very competitive at the international level," Akers said. "But the big problem is going to be the traffic around the tighter turns."

Sixteen runners have qualified for the 1,000-meter race.

Former Eastern booter honored as Dallas College Player of the Year

By SALLY VAN OSTEN
Staff writer

Former Eastern soccer player Mark Francis has been named the Dallas All-Star College Player of the Year.

Other young talents who have received the honor include Brian Bosworth of the Oklahoma Sooners and John Koncak of the Atlantic Hawks.

Francis attended Eastern as a freshman recruit in 1983 from London. Eastern's former soccer coach Schellas Hyndman found Francis amidst the London fog and offered him an athletic scholarship.

Though the offer did fall through, Francis managed to find the money to attend Eastern and play American soccer.

Mark Francis

"I always wanted to come to America, playing soccer at Eastern gave that opportunity," Francis said.

Former Eastern soccer player Terry Ziemann reflected on Francis' freshman year at Eastern.

"When Mark was here in '83, we were by far the best team in the nation. Mark is an incredible soccer player. There will never be a team like that again," Ziemann said.

Eastern enjoyed one of its finest seasons in 1983. The Panthers were ranked as high as No. 3 in the nation. However, Eastern was upset by St. Louis University 2-1 on a rain-soaked day. (See FORMER, page 15A)

Cleveland State downs UTC 92-73

The AMCU-8's Cleveland State defeated the University of Tennessee-Chattanooga 92-73 at Chattanooga Thursday in the first round of the National Invitation Tournament.

The Vikings advance to the second round of the tournament which begins Monday. Pairings for the second round will not be determined until after all first-round games are over, but chances are good that CSU will play at home.

"The dream continues," Viking coach Kevin Mackey said in a news release. "My older guys really came out tough tonight," he said referring to Ken McFadden who led in scoring with 21 points and Clinton Ransey who added 20.

The Moccasins were paced by James Hunter and Maurice Head who both had 15 points.

"Before the game I wrote 'good start' on the board, and then I repeated it five times in the huddle before the game," Mackey said.

The Vikings shot out to a 6-0 advantage and never lost the lead, although the Moccasins did cut it to 54-52 with 17:38 remaining in the game.

Cleveland State ups its season record to 25-7 while UTC ends its season at 21-8.

Sluggers hobble to open season against Murray

By DAN VERDUN
Sports editor

Eastern will hobble into its season-opening game series at Murray State this weekend looking more like a M*A*S*H unit than a baseball team.

The Panthers, 29-22-1 a year ago, will enter 1987 with a pitching staff decimated by injuries.

Right-handers Dave Goodhue and Brian Hillman may be lost for the season with serious ailments. Left-hander Eric Hillman has also been slowed by arm troubles. However, Hillman will start Saturday's single game.

"He (Hillman) wanted to throw, so we're going to let him," McDevitt said. "He may only go two or three innings, but we'll start him."

McDevitt said that he'll likely bring in junior David Scott or senior Jim Prims in relief of Hillman.

A pair of Panther newcomers—junior transfer Steve Readnour and freshman Brian Deese—will start in Sunday's double-header.

Pitching is not the only area of Eastern's season that has been shaken by injuries. Shortstop Bogar has been plagued by an ailment to his throwing arm and will likely miss at least two weeks.

"Tim's arm looks fine in infield practice, but at the end of the game he can't lift his arm above his shoulder," McDevitt said.

Freshmen Jeff Jetel and Brian Jaspar, expected to platoon in left field, are questionable for the weekend because of injuries.

In addition, right-fielder Shannon Coppell hit .448 for Olney Central College last spring but suffered a swollen eye as a result of being bitten by a dog while lying in bed.

"I hope things aren't going to be like this all season, we're jinxed before we start," McDevitt said.

Despite such adversity, the Panthers are more than ready for the season to begin.

"We're ready to play," pre-season All-American Stan Royer said. "I think we can hit most of the pitching we'll face. I just hope our young pitchers come around."

McDevitt said that Murray State has a relatively small ballpark, a factor that could work in Eastern's favor. The Panthers possess a potent power lineup spearheaded by Royer, Coppell and center fielder Mike Rooney.

Royer stressed that because of its young lineup, Eastern must play together as a team—something the Panthers didn't always do last season.

"If we execute together we'll do fine, but if we don't and do things individually we'll have problems," Royer said. "We're not super, super-talented, we're going to have to execute as a team."

One factor that will hurt Eastern is that Murray State already has six games under its belt this season. The Thoroughbreds stand at 3-3 following a sweep by Illinois.

"Tom Dedin (Illinois' coach) told me Murray is a better team than last season, and they beat us 10-0 out-three last year," McDevitt said.

The Thoroughbreds, 16-27 last season, lost almost their entire pitching staff from last year. Outfielder Steve Groehn, who hit .312 with 10 home runs a year ago, anchors the offense.

The Lady Panthers finish the Gateway College Athletic Conference season by dropping a tough 53-51 decision to NCAA-bound Southern Illinois University. However, the Panthers captured their highest finish in the GCAC since becoming a league member.
